1.3 What are the key risks that are specific to the Company?

The most material risk factors specific to the Company, which may adversely impact the operations and/or financial position of the Company should the circumstances mentioned therein materialise, are as follows:

1.3.1 Risks associated with the dependence of the Company on its Subsidiaries

The Company does not carry out any trading activities or operations on its own and accordingly is economically dependent on the financial position and performance of its Subsidiaries. In this respect, therefore, the financial position and performance of the Company is directly affected by the financial and operational results of its Subsidiaries, and the risks faced by the Company are those risks that are inherent or attributable to the operations and business of its Subsidiaries.

1.3.2 Risks relating to dependence on research and development

If the Group does not adequately fund its research and development efforts, if its research and development investments do not translate into material enhancements to its offerings, or if the Group is unable to develop features, integrations, and capabilities internally due to certain constraints, such as employee turnover, lack of management ability, or a lack of other research and development resources, the Group may not be able to compete effectively and its business, results of operations, and financial condition may be adversely affected.

1.3.3 Risks relating to dependence on third-party products and vendor partners

The Group is dependent on its suppliers and vendor partners to carry out innovations and upgrades in hardware, software and services offerings, as well as, in turn, the acceptance of those innovations by customers. If any of its suppliers, vendors or third-party service providers fail to provide high quality service, or if such services result in a disruption of customers' businesses, the Group's reputation with its customers and its business, results of operations or cash flows could be adversely affected.

1.3.4 Risks associated with the Group's prevailing revenue generation model

The Group's revenue generation models are aimed at maintaining and increasing the proportion of recurring business across different segments, primarily via the renewal of software subscriptions and maintenance agreements. Should the Group not be able to price its recurring business offerings appropriately, these may become less attractive relative to those of competitors, resulting in lower revenues. Alternatively, pricing pressures could result in lower margins, which may have an adverse impact on the Group's operating and financial performance.

1.3.5 Risk relating to dependence on relationships with third-party providers, software providers' resellers, distributors and/or introducers

Failure by the Group to establish or maintain good working relationships with third-party partners, software providers, distributors, resellers and/or introducers, or failure by such third-party providers to successfully implement or support the solutions or integrations provided by the Group, could have a negative impact on the Group's ability to compete in the marketplace, or to grow revenue. Moreover, the Group is exposed to the margins, fees and costs imposed by software providers and manufacturers which may vary from time to time and there is no guarantee that the Group will be able to impose a corresponding equivalent adjustment in its own fees with its customers.

1.3.6 Risks relating to competition

Competitive pressures in the market or the Group's failure to compete effectively may result in price reductions, loss of customers and reduced revenue. Given the non-exclusive nature of the re-sale or distribution licenses typically granted to the Group within a specified territory, there is no guarantee that competitors will not offer the same or similar products and solutions in jurisdictions where the Group operates. Moreover, certain competitors of the Group may have greater financial, technical and marketing resources, which could render the Group's product and services offerings less desirable to customers, and result in the loss of customers or a strain on pricing of products and services, which could in turn, negatively affect the Group's business, results of operations and financial condition.

1.3.7 Risks relating to dependence on the efficient and uninterrupted operation of its computer systems

The products and/or solutions offered by the Group are exposed to the risk of malicious cyber-attacks as well as unintentional or accidental failures, vulnerabilities or bugs, any and all of which could result in loss or corruption of data, loss of competitive position, negative publicity, regulatory fines or claims by customers for losses sustained by them, and/or additional costs which could adversely affect the Group's business, results of operations, and financial condition. Moreover, the Group depends on the efficient and uninterrupted operation of its computer systems, and accordingly if any failure, disruption or other interruption, even temporary, were to occur, the activities of the Group could be interrupted, which could in turn adversely affect the Group's operating results, financial condition and prospects.

1.3.8 Risks relating to dependence on the Group's ability to meet the required service levels and aftersales obligations

As at the date of this Prospectus, approximately 11% of the Group's total revenue originates from maintenance agreements and service level agreements. Where the Subsidiaries are unable to meet the stipulated minimum requirements, obligations and service levels when providing services to its customers, this may result in a default under agreements with the Group's manufacturer, supplier or partner, thereby giving rise to potential liabilities and penalties. This may also result in a default under agreements with customers, which may expose the Group to significant penalties, including a requirement for the Group to refund fees received from such customers, and in certain cases, may also entitle customers to terminate their agreements.

1.3.9 The Group is susceptible to risks associated with the financial services industry and the iGaming industry

As at the date of this Prospectus, approximately 35% of the revenue of the Group is generated from services provided to credit and financial institutions, and approximately 8% of the revenue of the Group is generated from services provided to the iGaming industry. The financial services industry and iGaming industry are both highly regulated industries, as a result of which the Group may be subject to sector-specific obligations. The failure to comply with such obligations may expose the Group to significant liability, which could adversely affect the Group's business, results of operations or cash flows.

The Board's policy on any proposed dividend is to recommend a total dividend distribution of not less than 60% of distributable reserves to its shareholders. The intention is to distribute 75% and 70% of the Group's distributable reserves to its shareholders during financial year ended 31 December 2024 and financial year ended 31 December 2025, respectively, which the Board believes to be sustainable given the Group's expected future capital investment and projected financial performance.

2.2 Where will the securities be traded?

Application has been made to the Malta Stock Exchange for the Shares to be listed and traded on its Official List.

2.3 What are the key risks that are specific to the securities?

2.3.1 Suitability of investment in the Shares

An investment in the Shares may not be suitable for all recipients of this Prospectus. In the event that an investor does not seek professional advice and/or does not read and fully understand the provisions of this Prospectus, there is a risk that such investor may acquire an investment which is not suitable for his or her risk profile.

2.3.2 No existing market for the Shares

Although the Company has applied for the Shares to be admitted to listing on the Official List and for trading to commence thereafter, the Company can give no assurance that an active trading market for the Shares will develop or, if developed, could be sustained following the closing of the Offer. In addition, the Offer Price for the Offer Shares has been determined by the Selling Shareholders and may not be indicative of prices that will prevail in the open market following completion of the Share Offer. Consequently, investors may not be able to sell the Shares at a price equal to or greater than the price they paid in the Offer.

2.3.3 Dividend payment risk

The extent of any dividend distribution by the Company in the future, and the relevant timing and amount thereof, will depend upon, amongst other factors, the profit available for distribution for the year, the Directors' view on the prevailing market outlook, any debt servicing requirements, the cash flows of the Company, working capital requirements, the Board's view on current or future investments, and the requirements of the Act. Consequently, there is a risk that the holders of the Shares may not receive any dividend income.

2.3.4 The sale of substantial amounts of Shares in the secondary market

The sale of a substantial number of Shares by the Selling Shareholders in the public market after the lock-in restrictions put in place in connection with the Offer, may depress the market price of the Shares, and could impair the Company's ability to raise capital through the sale of additional equity securities.

2.3.5 The issue of additional Shares and dilution

The Group may issue additional equity or convertible equity securities and may also make awards of Shares under share-incentive or share option plans in the future. As a result, existing holders of Shares may suffer dilution in their percentage ownership or the market price of the Shares may be adversely affected as a result of additional Shares in the market.

2.3.6 Shares may be subject to market price volatility

The Offer Price of the Offer Shares is not indicative of the market price of the Shares following Admission. The market price of the Shares may be volatile and subject to wide fluctuations, as well as period to period variations in operating results or changes in revenue or profit estimates by the Group, industry participants or financial analysts. Material fluctuations in the price of the Shares could lead to investors getting back less than they invested or a total loss of their investment.
